Welcome to the 2018 Women Composers Festival of Hartford! This year's festival is bittersweet for me. We are presenting incredible music composed by some of my favorite people in the world. Over the last five years the composers, and I performers, and participants of WCFH have become a second family for me, and I bast summer, it has grown increasingly difficult for me to maintain a leadership position with the festival, and I have turned over many of my duties to the exceptional administrator Liz Bologna. She, with great support from the board of directors, is doing an incredible job with limited resources. We can look forward to great things in years to come!

The core of the festival this year is our opera scenes program on Saturday evening, featuring new dramatic works by Tawnie Olson and Elisabeth R. Austin. These two women and their operas have a lot to tell us about history, music, and womanhood. Dr. Olson's opera features conversations between Hildegard of Bingen and Eleanor of Aquitaine. Dr. Austin—who, a few years ago or so studied with none woman faced with unenviable options while trying to keep her family together. The Evangeline. This performance is WCFH's grandest undertaking and perhaps the closest we have come to realising our vision of supporting women's art in Hartford. Gonversations around the production of these operas led naturally to the rest of this music of Florence Price, an emphasis on the music of American composers in our WCForum, and the Sunday afternoon concert by Ensemble Musica Humana on the music of Florence Price, an emphasis on the music of American composers in our WCForum, and the Sunday afternoon concert by Ensemble Musica Humana on the music of Florence Price, an emphasis on the music of American composers in our work and the Sunday afternoon concert by Ensemble Musica Humana on the music of Florence Price, an emphasis on the music of American composers in our music of Florence Price, an emphasis on the music of American composers in our works and the Sunday afternoon concert by Ensemble Musica Humana on the music of Rustican Sunday afternoon songert by Ensemble Musica Humana on the music and writings of Hildegard.

There are too many wonderful people who have contributed to the festival to list here, but you will see their names and activities throughout the program. To my fellow organizers: this festival would be less than what it is without each and every one of you, and I hope that I will find a chance to thank you in person this week for what you do for our community.

Finally, to the creators, artists, musicians, and composers—woman or otherwise—who are creating new and beautiful things, and particularly to those who have encountered systemic barriers, harassment, assault, and discrimination: We see you. We love you. We thank you. pioneer on Broadway, and Keith Aleo. He has previously worked as an instructor at Stephen F. Austin State University, Manchester Community College, and as a student, was a Teacher's Assistant at the University of Connecticut, SUNY Fredonia, the New York Summer Music Festival, and the Interlochen Center for the Arts.

Marcia Killian is the owner of The Foundry Music Company, an independent sheet music retailer located in New Haven, CT. Prior to her purchase of the business in November of 2014, Marcia worked in Information Technology in the Financial Services industry for over 30 years. She joined the Board of Directors of the Women Composers Festival of Hartford in June of 2017 as its Vice President/Treasurer.

With 90% of its floor-space dedicated to sheet music, Foundry Music is one of the last remaining shops of its kind between NYC and Boston. Its customers include music teachers, school systems, universities, churches, large choral groups, solo musicians and small ensembles. The shop often procures music from tiny specialty publishers and self-published composers for its clients. As part of the company's evolution, plans include expanding offerings by contemporary composers, and highlighting the work of women composers and composers from local communities.

Rami Levin received her B.A. from Yale University, an M.A. in composition from the University of California, San Diego, and a Ph.D. in composition from the University of Chicago. Her catalog includes pieces for orchestra, chorus, and chamber ensembles, which have been performed internationally.

Her work, A New Leaf, commissioned by Chicago Symphony Orchestra clarinetist John Bruce Yeh, was recorded by him on Koch International Classics. Her Anima/breath of life was recorded by the Warsaw Philharmonic Orchestra and her Concerto for Clarinet and Orchestra was recorded by the Slovak Radio Orchestra with Richard Stoltzman, clarinet. Both works were released on MMC Recordings. Orquestra Sinfônica Nacional of Rio de Janeiro recorded her Expressões on the Brazilian label, A Casa Estudio.

While living in Chicago, Levin served as president of American Women Composers, Midwest and was founding director of the chamber music series Lake Forest Lyrica. She served as Chair of the Department of Music at Lake Forest College and Associate Dean of Faculty and in 2005 was named Composer-in-Residence. The recipient of a Fulbright award in 2008, she spent a semester teaching and composing in Brazil at the Federal University of the State of Rio de Janeiro. She now lives in Connecticut.

Sacha Peiser is a soprano, voice/piano educator, arts administrator, and music theorist based in San Diego, California. After earning a bachelor's degree in vocal performance from Loyola University New Orleans, Peiser pursued a master's in music theory from Louisiana State University. Upon completion of a doctoral voice minor from Louisiana State, she began her doctoral studies in music theory/musicology from the University of Connecticut, where her dissertation was successfully defended in 2017. Peiser began her relationship with WCFH in 2015 when she served on a discussion panel, and joined the board shortly thereafter, eventually serving as President during the 2016-2017 season. She has enjoyed presenting her research, performing, and working with so many talented people to bring this important Festival to fruition over the past few years.

She received her MM and Feminist Studies Graduate Certificate from the University of Connecticut, and her BA in English and Theater from Boston College. She is a classical soprano who has sung with such companies as Opera Theater of Connecticut, Hartford Opera Theater and the Amherst Early Music Festival.

In Fall 2017, three students ranging from high school through graduate school were selected to participate in the Women Composers Festival of Hartford's redesigned student workshop. Over the winter, the students attended in-person sessions with workshop leader Dr. Jessica Rudman and received online mentoring as they composed new pieces for string quartet. Their work will culminate in a public reading session with the WCFH's ensemble-in-residence Cuatros Puntos.

During the session, Cuatro Puntos will workshop the pieces, offer advice on idiomatic compositional techniques for strings as well as what attracts them to a new work. This year's participants are:
